Comedians include:

Scott Higgins

Scott's first interest in performing came at a young age. He used to perform impressions of family members at family functions. In high school he was thrown out of biology class for doing an impression of the teacher. He was voted class clown too little surprise. In 2000, he was persuaded to perform by good friend comedian Cal Verduchi. In 2001, one year after his restart, Scott was a runner up in the Sam Adams Comedy Festival in Rhode Island. He has been heard on radio including 95.5 WBRU in Providence, RI and XM Satellite Radio nationally. In 2006 he appeared in his first movie "Street Players" a Road Rambler Films production. Scott's view of everyday life through the absurd male point of view continues to be a hit with crowds everywhere he performs.

Ace Aceto

That funny guy you meet at every party takes it to the stage for a party of his own..

Growing up in an Italian/Catholic household and going to Catholic school as a kid has made Ace Aceto what he is today...inquisitive and irreverent! He may look young, but for over 20 years Ace has been entertaining audiences throughout the Northeast with his unique and edgy twist on topics ranging from The Dangers of Buffalo Wings to Catholic Guilt. Ace energetically works the stage adding lots of audience participation to his shows.

Dr. Jay Sutay

A somewhat frustrated pediatrician brings his tales from the exam rooms, his experience working with kids and their parents, as well as his own tribulations as the father of two teenage daughters to his stand up comedy. His cutting and sometimes incisive commentary about society, parenting and raising kids, has left audiences laughing, and begging for more Dr. Jay!!
